I think people need show more respect to their elders. Nowadays, most teenagers are rude, impolite, and inconsiderate. If they were nicer to others, maybe they would be liked more. Kids need to be politer, too. If everyone was nice, polite, and caring, maybe the world wouldn't have quite as many problems. People might get better jobs, and have more friends. It might even help the economy. We also need to take better care of our environment. The oil spill in the gulf will just get worse and worse if we don't do something about it. If we were more aware of our actions, then maybe we might have better lives. Maybe we could even change the whole world if we tried. So I think everyone should try to say something nice to everyone at least twice a day.
