This world that we share is a beautiful creation. It is work of art that is to be enjoyed, treasured, and respected. This realization comes to most of all when I sit and gaze out over the expanse of the sea. Here we have a glimpse of what this magnificent globe was created to be, it is a look back into time at a natural reality of this planet in its raw splendor. When looking over the salty mist of the crashing waves to the birds that swirl around the water's edge and then farther still to the wide horizon that bends away into seeming eternity, I can't help but take my breath in and marvel in silent awe. An overpowering sense of gratitude takes me aback and I can't be thankful enough to a God who crafted this vista of serenity and power that deeply inspires my soul. If it were for none but this, the reality of our responsibility to protect and treasure this world would be undeniable.
