

Experiences

Being in school for 10 years, human rights, the environment, love and peace are all topics that we have broached before in many occasions. It could be from an errant conversation that you have while ignoring the teacher in Life class, or something you suddenly find yourself talking about during lunch. For I can safely say I have some options on these subjects. Regarding human rights, I think in this ago and time, women being discriminated against is totally ridiculous. And for the environment, global warming is a huge problem. What can we do? Plant trees, stop driving when you can walk or carpool, use biodegradable items, and recycle. The list goes on and on has to love or learn to live this place and everything on it and keep peace in the world.

This is what I know put in a nutshell. But the only message that is the most important to convey is: save the world for future generations, make it a better place for you and for me...both of us. Love the Earth.
