

Cultural Pride

Over the last week, I have been a TA (teaching assistant) to a summer camp called Wisdom Camp. A largely Chinese camp, Wisdom Camp promoted many ethnic ties that bind us together.

In the process of being a TA, I have realized how much patriotism and cultural ties play into America's society. I have seen how many unique individuals can be bound together by shared heritage. As a consequence, I have realized that love and peace can be best achieved through the usage of this shared heritage. Although it is difficult to accept that something as brutal as nationalism can be beneficial towards world peace and love, it seems that in the end, we the people of the Earth must accept that nationalism and other factors do exist and that we must go with them or seriously fail.