

Environmental protection team work

In the summer of 2010, volunteer as a TA in a Chinese wisdom culture camp. When we watch a video on global warming, one of the kids asked me what it was. When I explained, she sobbed nonstop for twenty minutes. As a living breathing person on the earth, I think we all have to work together to protect our planet so that the kids now can live safely, and have the same opportunities we have now. How? Step by step is all it takes. Whether it be from conserving water to recycling to turning off the lights. All the small things we do everyday compile to make a big difference. If everyone thinks "I am just one person" what can I do? Then we get millions of people not helping the world we live in.

As my team leader told us, you might not care, but your teammates care. We are one world, one big family. Even if you don't care, it will and can impact the future. One arcing an is a little speck in the midst of thousands. However, individual working together creates a emotional working colony. We as human beings can't be selfish and want everything for ourselves such as taking the car because it involves less effort, or having trash around because we are too lazy to work the extra five steps. The reason is, in the end, we just jeopardize ourselves. So by everyone working to keep their own environment clean, the whole world will be a nicer place to live in. So the proverb goes "If everyone cleans the front of their novae, the whole street will be cleaned." After all this, with team work and being active in cleanliness, global warming is reduced, and my little camper is safer everyday. Even though I am one person, we are one world, one life.
