Peace is one of the most beautiful words one will find in dictionary. It is a dream which hasn't yet come true and will never be achieved by the human race. Peace is a child smile, it is love, it is as beautiful as a waterfall and it is the most important things which is required by the world, however it seems to be impossible in the modern world today, where people from different walks of life will enjoy complete harmony and tranquility.

The growing tension between developed and developing countries, the no solution for old problems, the widening gap between the rich and the poor and the increasing number of the people living in poverty lines are the main issues which serves as a hindrance to attain peace. If this problem will not be taken seriously, this world will be a living hell.

Today is the best time for us to powerful people might exploit the situation. People must understand that all of us were created and loved by God, we are unique animals blessed with sensitivity and rationality. far this, I strong"! believed, that there is no conflict which cannot be resolved, it only requires effort, sincerity, com pas ion, patience, endurance and about all respect. We are now in a new millennium which requires a new vision. War belongs to the past, to uncivilized responses to conflict. Peace negotiation, reconciliation and facilitation belong to the growing spirit of advance humanity. However let us remember, that the quest of peace begins at home, at school and at workplace. We must learn to develop a culture of peace within each of this environment before we can go beyond. Let us seek to become abolitionist of violence, envisioning a world with harmony and tranquility, without poverty and without injustice. Let us give wings to that vision by creating movements for disarmament and demanding social justice. Let us hope that one day our vision of peace will become a living reality.

Seriously speaking, the issues that we are facing today are many and complex, but we must begin to dream of new possibilities to envision a brave new world it out fear and terrorism. Our violent history is a known fact and as we begin the 21st century, people are experiencing an intolerable level d insecurity, violence and deprivation of human rights.

Yes, I admit that peace is rare commodity in today's world. This is evident through the dissatisfaction of individual and through lack of proper understanding between people of different races and culture.

A culture of peace is necessary for a meaningful life together.
