As years go by, Inventions were very rampant. Many technologies were discovered to assist our everyday lives; many transportation and chemical industries were build which contributes a lot in the improvement of our society, but despite of this improvement, the destruction of our mother earth occurs.

Earth is currently the only place in the universe where life is known to exist. A home for millions of species including humans and an attractive planet with beautiful surroundings, but with just a blinked of the eye, our planet changed. Now, our planet is already facing an environmental crisis. Explosion of human populations, global warming, depletion of natural resources, and extinction of many species, wars and conflicts were tremendous this time.

Every nation and every parts of our world is discussing about this problems and how to save our earth from this biggest threat. some people say that scientist are over reacted with the condition of our planet and some also blamed that science is the cause of this, well think! Science is just a systematized body of knowledge and should not be blamed. Instead, we humans, who are living in this world, are the cause of these problems, we are the one who misuse and abuses science, and we are the one who utilizes and should be accountable of its result.

The problem that we're facing now is very serious, our mother earth is indeed gasping for breath right now; our harmful pollutions are poisoning her slowly and continues to destroy her, with her ozone layer. I think it is about time to give are response to the problem of the only planet we live in, by doing our own share of protecting her. By just a simple thing, you can already help changing the condition of our mother earth. If not, we will be harming ourselves; nature has its own destructive way of disciplining us human, the earth displeasure are now seen and felt. That's why lets link our arms together and be united, our mother earth is seeking for our care and respect, let's show it to her. Participate in all activities aiming to save our earth, plant trees, reduce, reuse and recycle things.

But bear in mind, that for us to achieve our goals of saving our mother earth, it must start with our own selves.
