

CHILD LABOR (CHILD ABUSE)

Ibno, Ajiri T.
BS Criminology
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

We all know that human rights abuses really are happening in our country, from the past until now. These kinds of acts will still happen if the government will not make any action to stop these human rights violations. And maybe because of the high influence of that violator, usually a government official involved, some of the law enforcers cannot make an immediate action to arrest the person.

Philippines is a developing country and yet has one of the biggest population in Asia. And poverty is prevailing in our country. Due to this, there are children, at a very young age, already working for their family. We cannot blame them for doing it, because they need to work for them to be able to buy food. It is really sad to know this, they have to do this for their family.

Parents of this children seem doesn't care that much. They would still get pregnant. The government is promoting family planning and it's for free. But they are not availing this program. To solve this problem, the parents and government should coincide with each other.