Human rights mean that these are rights given to a person, like the freedom to life. But there are people who commit crimes or go against the law. Not all who commits crimes are intentional, there are instances of accidents or unexpected events, but they are charged and imprisoned. Corruptions, torture, salvage, stealing, and anything that would take away the rights of a person are examples of human rights abuses. People should respect everyone's rights and have discipline in their self. And it's just right that criminals should be jailed for their crimes that they intentionally done.
