

HUMAN RIGHTS ABUSE

Sheena Mae Avila
BS Criminology
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

What do human rights mean to me? Human rights are rights and freedoms of each person living in this world. These are rights and freedoms. Everyone is entitled to his freewill. As what stated in the constitution, I have my rights, as everyone else does.

But sometimes these rights as we know it are being abused. Women are beaten, being raped. Children physically maltreated, forced to work at a young age. Police officers harassing civilians, torturing criminals, these are some examples of abuses of human rights. Innocent people who are weak are the ones being victims of human rights abuses.