

HUMAN RIGHTS AND EDUCATION

Sheeba L. Mawasi

BS in Medical Technology
School of Allied Medicine
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

People in this world have the right to live life in their own way. We need to know it all for us to understand and realize the importance of it in our daily lives. Human rights can bring harmony and peace. But then, it depends only in the way we apply to ourselves.

Human rights are rights inherent to all human beings, whatever our nationality, place of residence, sex, national or ethnic origin, color, religion, language, or any other status. We are all equally entitled to our human rights without discrimination. These rights are all interrelated, interdependent and indivisible. We have the rights to eat the kind of food we would prefer taking, to have shelter where we can live happily and contented, to love and be loved in return by other people, to give our opinions, to be educated. We also equally have the chance to create something that is beneficial to everybody. The great feeling of our existence in this world can only be felt by means of recognition and appreciation. We should feel the freedom to express feelings, emotions, thoughts, and even suggestions.

But it is a sad fact that not everybody is aware of his own right being a human and may also, in any way, have violated some of those rights for other people. Nobody indeed is perfect. This is the very reason why we should intertwine education with human rights. We should all be educated about human rights for we are all equally human, we have got same rights. Awareness about it leads the way to a more humane society. If everyone will respect each other's uniqueness and respect it, then we will no longer encounter violence and war.