

HUMAN RIGHTS

Alnasrip J. Balpaki
BS Criminology
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

Human rights are very important to us. These are laws, or I could say, rules and regulations that govern in a democratic country. All people are entitled freely of the rights. It is the government that employs and sustains the rights of every individual.

Human rights are rights and freedoms of the people as being human. The freedom to live freely; the freedom of equality; the freedom against discrimination; the freedom to fight against crimes: these are some examples of rights and freedoms that you and I should have.

But there are instances that our rights and freedoms are being abused and taken away. There are people that will use their power and authority for their selfish gain.