On my own understanding, human rights are a set of law for every person for their protection against harm. As what I perceived about human rights in our country, is that it is not equally distributed. As it should be and as stated in our law, there should be equality. But what is happening in our society is that if you are underprivileged, human rights seems not given on you. If you are poor then you are accused of a crime that you didn't even commit, but you have no means to prove to the court that you are innocent.

I want to see is that human rights are given evenly to all people living here in the Philippines. There should be equality for all. Fair and just is given to all.
