Human rights are laws that states people have the right to do what they want to do and they also have the right to decide for their own life. But of course there are limitations. We can do whatever we want as long we are not hurting other people, we're not crossing the boundary of taking away other's people rights.

We have the right to live. But it is not our right to take a man's life. Or kill an innocent baby. We have the right to good health. We don't have the right to give people that would lessen their health like drugs.
