I observed from my own home that when there are things that are lost or even house chores they always point me and blame me. There was a time that I am sick, my aunts told me to fetch her daughter at school, I respectfully refused what she asked to me because by that time I am not feeling well and I am very tired and sleepy, my aunt and uncle got mad at me and told me that I am too lazy to do what she ask for. That then they told me that I am the most foolish and dumb. Even when I done some mistakes they easily judge me that I have no initiative, dumb and stupid. I 'm really upset at that time because they treated me as their made and never given me any appreciation that they usually do to my other cousins. My closest family is my dad and my other uncle's wife. As now I always think that if there is a right to confront and fight back what they done to me. As for how I am relieved that I am away from them. I don really want fight with them that will lead to family disaster like what happened when I was at home.

My second observation is about the enrollment system, I observed that during drug testing the staff that is assigned for every step in drug testing, they give more attention to the students that they know that the students are the first one who came first. I though first come first serve but as I observe first know first serve is on the situation many students are delayed from that activity because of that situation. I hope that there is right to make any complains about this matter.
