Human rights these are policies made by a group of people, that each person shall be given the same rights. But if a person does not respect another person's rights, there are corresponding punishment in the Law. There are certain rights that pertain only to a specific group of people. Like the right of suffrage or the right to vote. If you are of legal age, 18 years old, you can practice your right to vote. Men in uniform should be not using their firearms unless needed to do so. If they are caught using their firearms illegally, he can be disarmed and be terminated from his duty. There are responsibilities to every right we have. We just cannot use them to harm other people.

The law states all the specific rights of each individual. The right to be born; the right to equality; and the right to have shelter, food and good health. These are just some of the rights that are stated in the law.
