

HUMAN RIGHTS

Rolando T. Tan
BS Criminology
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

The human rights just like freedom. You can do whatever you want to do, except take away the rights of other people. You have the right to talk, the right to health, the right to protect oneself from any danger. The purpose of the human rights is for us to have a peaceful living, good life. The human rights are very important to every individual. These rights are given freely to anyone.

The government is the one protecting us from the dangers. They are the ones upholding the rights of every individual. That's why we have Law Enforcers. They are there to protect and serve the people.