

Human Rights
Talon, Rusty Mark G.
Universidad de Zamboanga

Declaration of the Rights of man and of the citizen

Human rights are rights and freedoms to which all humans are entitled. All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights. They are endowed with reason and conscience and should act towards one another in a spirit of brotherhood.

Human Rights for me are rights inherent to all human being. What ever our nationality, place of residence, sex, national or ethic origin or any other status we are all equally entitled to our Human rights without discrimination.