I was able to witness one incident of a police abuse. Yesterday I was at the market at the vegetable section. There was an old woman selling vegetables on a "bilao". There were two police officers approached the woman and kicked all her vegetables. The old woman cried and she just picked up all scattered vegetables she was selling and left. This should not be the case. Even though they are police or higher position in society, they don't have the right to do that. They should be protecting the people not hurting them.
