

POLICE AND MILITARY ABUSE

Quintas, Reiven J.
BS Criminology
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

In my experience, in our place people are being maltreated and disrespected by the police and military if they are not known or not from a prominent family. They are being abused by the authorities. That's why most of the civilians in our place they are really scared of police and military personnel. They are there to do their job, to protect the people, not to harm the people.

The police what I observed is if there are crimes, they are always late in the scene and making excuses why they are late. They are just there at the police station making their self comfortable. Why they are not doing their job? They are being paid to do their job and be responsible for their job.

Money is sometimes the root of abuse. Money can control everything, can turn black into white especially in courts or trials. That's why some of the authorities are abusing because of money. There are even police involved in killings. People who are underprivileged are usually the victims of abuses. They are the ones being jailed, though some of them are innocent. And the rich people, who are suspects of crimes, they are getting freed from their crimes.