

POLICE AND MILITARY ABUSES

Stephanie M. Pates
BS Criminology
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

As I hear and observe the police and military are more powerful. They don't know how to use their power or authority in a proper way. Many of the police man use their position in gambling, they abuses civilians. They do not practice that every person have right to defend himself. Example are police who are assign in patrol they usually do "kotong" (term used for asking money from motorists) to have money. And also during the interview of the case or investigation of a crime, the investigator sometimes use force to the arrested person. There are many times that they tried to overcome civilians. They think they are powerful. Police men today are very irresponsible in doing their job. They are corrupt.

As I observed with our military, many of them who are assigned in combat are killing innocent people during their encounters. Some people are being accused of terrorists but they are innocent civilians. They abuse the rights of the people. They feel that they are powerful. They forget what their role in the society.