

PEACE AND HUMAN RIGHTS

Evenezer Al E. Esmael
Computer Engineering Department
Universidad de Zamboanga-Ipil
Zamboanga Sibugay Province, Philippines

Peace is visible when the society strives to maintain a good social relationship and better understanding of different beliefs, cultures and traditions as well as respect to human rights.

Accordingly, every human being has fair rights since birth and such right is used in dealing with life. Even the disable and less fortunate have equal rights claimed by a publicly active person. However, many underserved areas experience less privilege than those politically affluent areas. But let's not wait for the government to act. WE can attain peace starting from our homes.

A family living in harmony can build a dynamic nation. An economically dynamic nation is a progressive nation; a progressive nation can build a peaceful world. A peaceful world can bring a better tomorrow for the next generation.

Let's not just sit and do nothing. As youth of the present world, let's take a stand and do something to promulgate peace. Do not stay complacent in the midst of silence because noise may sometimes be a peaceful act. There is no peace guarantee that there is peace in silence.