

PEACE AND HUMAN RIGHTS

Joybel T. Ramasasola
Accountancy Department
Universidad de Zamboanga-Ipil
Zamboanga Sibugay Province, Philippines

Can you imagine a world without a peace? Peace can be a mental or spiritual condition marked by freedom from disquieting or oppressive thoughts or emotions: calmness of mind and heart.

Peace was included as our basic needs of a person nowadays..Especially in Mindanao, We live in the time of the end, in critical times hard to deal with. The Massacre of Ipil back way 1994, and I have a good reason to view that day as the most crucial in history, affecting the whole future of mankind in Ipil, the sacrificial death of the Leader and the Arm Forces.

Today, we live in the world that is deeply troubled. Millions are personally affected or deeply disturbed by a serious breakdown in family life and moral standards, an alarming increase in strange diseases, political instability, unemployment, food shortages, terrorism, and the threat of war. Many people are troubled with a brooding fear of the future. Even children can be seriously affected by such depressing factors. So how can we keep calm, untroubled in these difficult times? Can we maintain peace of mind when the going gets tough? And how can we face the future with confidence? And what happened to our children? Childhood is supposed to be a happy time. A time of being cherished, sheltered... A time of innocence. The young are expected to play, to learn and to develop qualities that will help them become responsible adults. Children are not supposed to be killed and they are certainly not supposed to become killers. In times of war however many things happen that are not supposed to happen.

Sadly warfare abounds on a global scale, and it reaps a young harvest, laying waste both to children and to childhoods. Major conflicts, political violence, etc. Many young people today have never known peace. By the end there had been fighting between Filipino versus Filipino ..

Because of the great deal of suffering there is in the world due to a lack of justice. Widespread abuse of power on the part of some political rulers has resulted in much unjust suffering. Greedy interest oppresses people resulting in much hardship. So, where are human rights? All we know each of us need this and if we have only peace- then it will not only lead us on in making known our hope for justice but also encourage us to act in harmony with divine justice in all our dealings.

But what happened today, it is not of what we expected, there is much abuse of power and resultant injustices within our community. True, in the meantime mankind has had to endure immense suffering and often untimely death. The list of troubles seems endless killings, over population, ethnic conflict, political upheaval-and those troubles common to all humans. The conclusion must be that nowhere on this planet will be a place entirely free. Over millions of people are even now working toward that, but there are also billions of terrorist who wanted wars.

Human efforts to remove them have so far failed! Present day injustice allows the governments I think... so maybe only Gods power has the only means to remove all these troubles by means of his heavenly government reform. However you can say this thoughts are like a dream, to be sure, it would be delightful if it come true, but it will?