

PEACE AND HUMAN RIGHTS

Patrick John V. Abella
Computer Engineering Department
Universidad de Zamboanga-Ipil
Zamboanga Sibugay Province, Philippines

Peace is an aspect of healthy culture where there is no hostility, conflict and discrimination. Accordingly, peace is a state of tranquility but can also be attained in the midst of noise and that is through internal peace which is also referred to as personal peace.

To live in harmony with my kind and people of different culture, understanding the diverse beliefs, traditions and practices is the illustration of peace. Ideas may differ in a multi-culture and multi-lingual society.

Peace is really needed in building a better world for people of tomorrow. In order for a person to enjoy life that is peaceful and worth living, human rights must be exercised. Human rights is also made for the enjoyment of others and not just yours. Therefore, respect to each other rights must be observed.