

“Human Rights”

Ignacio, Raquel P.
School of Allied Medicine
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City

Human rights are universal invisible and interdependent. Human rights are what make us human. When we speak of the right to life, or development; or to dissent and diversity we are speaking of tolerance. Tolerance will ensure all freedoms. Without it, we can be certain of none.

Our country was founded on the basic idea that all man and woman are created equal with liberty and justice for all. Human rights are those rights which are inherit of each of us by virtue of the fact we are members of the human species. Without respect for each other's basic rights, organized anything would be virtually impossible.