

Human Rights

By: Indanan, Fahadz
School of Allied Medicine
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

Human Rights in my own opinion is governed by law, created by individual who has the power to enforced it with the society; a leader who creates laws to governed and guide an individual about their acts. Their acts are regulated by the law wherein individuals may be punished accordingly to its case and the right and just consequences given to that person who commits violation. Furthermore, these laws are enforced aside from teaching of the church to protect each individual who are oppressed and poor.

These human rights may be a benefit for others. The acts of people can be easily evaluated by everyone using only our conscience and our knowledge whether it is moral or immoral in the society where we belong. And all mankind are all considered rational wherein they have the capacity to think and make decisions by their own. In our country, all forms of human trafficking are all or all of them rather have their respective punishment in regards to the action of the person being accused.