

HUMAN RIGHTS

Zaina S. Arabain
School of Allied Medicine
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

Human Rights - is a very broad term. It talks about the privileges of every person in a society as a human being. Well, I think right such as children and women's right are under the human rights. So, every right that a person has an obligation or responsibility to be followed. Abuse of rights could cause conflicts among people in the society. A best of example for abuse of human right are people who over react in a circumstance that they are involved like when they speak up or talk things about a certain person or a group of people even if they don't really have a solid proofs to their accusations to the person or group of people---right or freedom of speech are abused in this instance.

Respect of Human Rights - is should be observed or present among people: If this is present, conflicts among people would not be occurred. Every right of a person, as what I have said has obligation or responsibility, or shall I say, limitation. It doesn't mean that you have rights others don't and you can just easily do everything that you would like to do or violate other people's rights. The presence of respect of Human Rights is one of the major keys to world peace.

World peace - is a very crucial. It is indeed hard to attained but not impossible if we believe that we could have world peace and if we cooperate and participate to every things that our government or the authority. We may think that what they are doing do us are ridiculous and have no progress to every individual especially to our nation and they are the ones to blame. But what we don't think is that we all depend to the government. Peace is actually not easily to have nor to find. We can only achieve peace if start finding it within ourselves and once we found it within us, we should start sharing it to people around us. You see, Philippines is a very diverse country, so the world is too since different nations build the world. Generally, peace is achieved if love, understanding, respect to the differences of people are present.