

RIGHT TO EDUCATION

By: CATA CUTAN, MICHELLE GRACE M.

School of Allied Medicine
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

The Right to education proclaimed that each and every one of us has the right to have our own education. This Human right is everyone's foundation. As stated, education promotes respect, understanding, tolerance, friendship among all races, religion and all nations and the key to full development of human personality. This article or law does not only entail for wealthy people but also for low class or unfortunate ones. Government of every country has set aside large budget that would help the poor have their free education. Example here in our country our government has built public schools in every Barangay of every City of our country to promote Philippine education. These public schools had even provided "scholarship programs and supply of books" for low-income families who cannot afford to send their siblings in elementary. The right to education imposed free primary and secondary education, while college depends on the capacity and perseverance of the student.

This program provided means for children who wanted to pursue and impart hope to their lives. Education cultivates human being. Physical, mental, emotional and spiritual ethics are brought together as one. In rural areas, youth are less likely contented with secondary education. High school graduates earn higher salaries rather than elementary graduates. For province people, higher level of education (post-secondary) serves to identify higher salary.

College is more important, additional growth and development of our values are provided here and our opportunity comes along. Education helps us speak our minds, speak in front of many people, speak the confidence within us and speak who we really are as a person.

Nowadays, different countries are experiencing obstacles that is limiting our youth access to education. Teenage pregnancies, government's shortage of financial budget, children engaged in war and trained in armed conflicts, affected with viral syndrome and captivated children are one of these obstacles. But still, nothing is impossible for a person who pursues education.

"Education is vital to the healthy growth and development of one's personality".