

The Lack of Human Rights

By: Lawas, Cherry Ann L.

School of Allied Medicine
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

Human rights are the rights inherent to all human being who live in this world, whatever they or our nationality, place of residence, sex, status, national or ethnic origin, color, religion, languages, faces, behavior, personality, tribe or where we came from and or any other status we have in this world. Still we are all equally entitled to our human rights without discrimination. Because all human beings living in this world are born free and equal in dignity and rights and we as human being we have our individual rights. Because we are endowed with reason and conscience and should act towards one another. The human right is described equal rights, obligations and freedom for everybody by the fact of being human. But now, however many of human being living in this world have always suffered from the lack of human rights. In fact the lack of human rights has a lot of effects on people lives. Just like child labor we all know that this is one of the results and reasons of the lack of human rights all around the world. Because many children now are working under age between 6 to 15 years old many of them work in farms, mines, prostitution, selling flowers in the streets, construction and work with dangerous chemical. So while they are working in this kind of job they paid in minimum wages and don't have any health insurance. Even though there should be equal rights for every child, the child should have the right to be treated good and they should not be working while they are under age because in this situation they should be send in school for them to educate and learn something. We know some of their parents cannot afford for them to go to school that's why they choose and try to work for them to live and help their families that's why many of them suffered. The right of the child is to be protected from economic exploitation and from performing any work that is likely to be hazardous or to interfere with the Childs education, or to be harmful to the child's health or physical, mental, spiritual, moral or social development. So as human being at the individual level, while we are entitled our human rights, we should respect the human rights of others for us to leave in this world peacefully.