“World peace” is an ideal of freedom, peace, and happiness among all humanity and within all nations and/or peoples. World peace is a planetary non-violence by which all nations willingly cooperate, either voluntarily or no voluntary of a system of governance that prevents war. Although the term is sometimes used to refer to hostility among all individuals, world peace more commonly refers to a permanent end to global and nation wars with past and future conflicts resolved through nonviolent means. World peace is sometimes claimed to be the inevitable result of a certain political ideology. "The march of democracy will lead to world peace." Said by the former president of US. World peace concept is to encourage everyone to participate no matter what cultural background, religious doctrine, political affiliation or age demographic. There are many ways to promote peace in the world but the best way is to promote it within ourselves. Peace is a wonderful event that occurs because compassionate people are inspired to help others discover the joy of peace. Helping others also has the direct effect of increasing our personal peace and well-being, but this is merely one of the many bonuses that come from sharing our kindness with our fellow human beings. Peace is probably the most important lesson we should learn during our lives and the sooner the better. It improved a good and peaceful communication. but sad to say that human approach to world peace is differ how It is ironic that the more serious problems emanate from the more industrially advanced societies. Science and technology have worked wonders in many fields, but the basic human problems remain. There is unprecedented literacy, yet this universal education does not seem to have fostered goodness, but only mental restlessness and discontent instead. There is no doubt about the increase in our material progress and technology, but somehow this is not sufficient as we have not yet succeeded in bringing about peace and happiness or in overcoming suffering. I can conclude that there must be something seriously wrong with our progress and development, and if we do not check it in time there could be disastrous consequences for the future of humanity. It is great to have an advance science technology but they have contributed immensely to the overall experience of humankind; to our material comfort and well-being and to our greater understanding of the world we live in. But if we give too much emphasis to science and technology we are in danger of losing touch with those aspects of human knowledge and understanding that aspire towards honesty and altruism. As we all know science technology is capable of creating a immeasurable material comfort, cannot replace the age-old spiritual and humanitarian values that have largely shaped world civilization, in all its national forms, as we know it today. No one can deny the unprecedented material benefit of science and technology, but our basic human problems remain; we are still faced with the same, if not more, suffering, fear, and tension. Thus it is only logical to try to strike a balance between material developments on the one hand and the development of spiritual, human values on the other. In order to bring about this great adjustment, we need to revive our humanitarian values. I am pretty sure that all people shares their many concern about the present state of our world today and willing to help and to make our all nation today more compassionate, in promoting “world peace”.
