

Yeah, You're Right

(Oo, Karapatan Mo!)

By: Sarah T. Abdul
School of Allied Medicine
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

Before I'll begin, allow me first to ask you this simple yet too profound query."Are you satisfied with your right as a human?". I know some of you are satisfied while others are not. Well, whatever your answers might be, just keep it with yourselves and let it be your guidance to have a happy life.

Human worth begins when we were still with our mother's womb. We owned it and it definitely means, every child that was made by their parents has the right to be born and experience the beauty of life.

Every detail of being a human has the right of everything. Whether you were born rich, pauper, gifted with beautiful face or not, talented or not, intelligent or not, girl, boy and most of all being part of the third sex. We deserve every right in this world. We have the right to eat, right to enjoy our borrowed life, right to choose and decide for our own sake, right to be happy, right to love and to be loved, right to respect and to be respected, and above all, right to live our lives to the fullest!!.

Human right doesn't end whenever a certain person commits neither a sin nor a crime. As the sayings says "forgive the sinners not the sin". People must not judge right away the sinners. Allow them to reform, give them a chance to change because I personally agree that everybody deserves a second chance.

We are all creation of our dear Almighty God. And as his children, we are all equal, no one is born superior to us, whoever we are right now, where ever we are and whatever position we have. Enjoy every right that you are entitled, never use it against your constituents instead, use it in a right way.