I would like to share some of my piece of puzzle, It was during my high school days, high school days was fun and a great moment for teenagers, time for puppy love and time for self discoveries. Though we are poor, still my parents have this will to let us go to school. I finished my high school and time for college. At present I am a student in the morning and a service crew in the evening. This is to support my studies, my parents cannot support my education, I understand, because we are not financially stable. The courage right now that I have is to finish my studies and to have a better job in that I can give my family a good life. The strength that I have comes from my family. Still the fulfillment of my dream is like a puzzle to solve.
