Environment is surrounding atmosphere/ condition for existence environment also essential natural process or an outcome of occurrence and environment has two types: one is negative and the other is the positive. Planet Earth is the only planet that has life. It also supports the needs of all living things. Like what I have said, all living and nonliving things exist here is what we call ecosystem.

Nowadays, people suffer from global problem like the global warming which caused by factories’ smoke, vehicles, and many other sources of pollution, while I believe that the whole global warming thing is a farce, that does not mean we shouldn’t take better care of the earth. We do live here and dumping trash in our home is a pretty dumb thing to do. We can help by picking up garbage, recycle, and disposing of chemicals and oil properly and conserving energy. All of these are equally important to help keeping from killing more of the earth. When we go out camping, we always clean up the garbages that people left around at the bank and at the campground. Now that are kids are grown, they do the same thing. From the start of time as we know it, mankind has accepted the duty to reproduce. This has been pre-programmed behavior to ensure the survival o f the species. Many decades have passed and with each, the human population on earth has grown exponentially. Today, our survival is still in danger. Population plays a major role. However this time around, we need population control.

So, we people must wake up for the reality for what is going on in our environment. Let us save Mother Earth and think how we can help her by doing simple things. These simple things can make a big change to our dearly planet. So that, our dearly planet will return the good things that we’ve done to her. So that other generations can still see how beautiful the world is.
