What is earth? Why do we need to value it? And why do we need to protect it? Well basically, earth is just one of the planets that can be found in the universe, and the only thing that makes it special is because it is the planet where we humans and other earth creatures live and learned to civilize. It also provides us the protection we need against the dangerous radiations on space. Lands, plants, food, and, air, this are just few of the things that the planet provides us in order for us to live.

Sadly, after all the years that had pass, the planet once full of trees and clean air, is now dramatically changing. Some of the water areas are now polluted, which causes the risk of the lives of some creatures. Smokes that come from factories contribute to pollute air. And some trees are being cut down until nothing's left to grow. All of the mentioned phenomena are caused by non-other but we, the humans.

Using the earth's environment in order to live is only natural, because even the ancient creatures used it, but the difference between them and the modern man is that, we over used it. Over using of the environmental material is not the only reason for this damage. Lack of cleanliness is also a reason for this, because all the waste that the factories, homes, and, vehicle are polluting our surrounding. Factories emits smoke which cause the air to get polluted, home waste can inflict the health of the planet if it is not disposed properly, and vehicles are also a source of dangerous smoke. All of the pollution damages not only the earth but also the creatures on it.

The earth is being damage every time, so in order to prevent it from being a wasteland we must protect by not polluting the surroundings and not over use its environmental materials.

Earth is also known as the "mother earth" because for millions of years, it has been our home in the universe, and the only way we can repay it is to value and protect it.
