

My Paradise, Is It Still A Paradise Now?

Earth is the only place where people live in. Earth is the only place where all living organisms can survive. Without the planet Earth, could we still think life will exist?

We all know that we are so lucky that we still have a place to live, a river to swim at and a tree to climb on. Our environment nowadays is no longer the same as the environment a decade or a century ago. As time passes by, our environment differs. These changes are made only by us humans or us, people.

Isn't it nice to live in a home which is clean, fragrant and well-ventilated? Isn't it nice to have a well-groomed and a well-polished car? Isn't it nice to live in a place which is garbage-free? I am sure, all people dreamed to have these things.

I know most people like to have these things. But, have we even tried to think about our Mother Earth or simply our environment? Have even dared to save it? Have we even tried to do something to be able to help it?

These questions can never been answered with "yes". Not all people care for our environment. Not all people tried to do something to help to save and not all the people tried to give something good in return to our environment.

We people never realized that our environment is really much important to be taken cared of than fancy things. If we do not realize the worth of our environment we are considered ignorant people.

Our environment is really important. This is where our daily needs come from. This is where we do our daily activities and this is where we live.

Therefore, this is really, really, really important. We were born humans. But we still need to learn how to act as humans. We can only consider ourselves as human beings when we realize the importance of saving our environment.

Life is too short. We should make the most out of it. We should realize the fact that from generation to generation, children will be born. We should feel pity for them. If we will continue to destroy our environment, they will no longer be able to experience swimming in the rivers or neither climbing trees. We should give them the chance to experience these things. Our conscience will really bother us at times when we will see that the children of the future will never feel the true meaning of environment.

I wrote this essay to open-up the minds of all the people most especially the youth. We, as youth, are the future leaders. If the efforts done by our current leaders, to save our environment is not that effective, we as the future leaders are the ones who should improve these.

We should segregate, reuse, reduce and recycle things. Our environment can never be replaced, it can only be saved. Save our environment. Save Mother Earth.
