Human rights are rights and freedom to which all humans are entitled. Like for example, “battery” which falls under RA No. 9262 anti-violence against women and children act of 2004.

This speaks not only of battery but for all forms of discrimination against women and children. May that be physical, sexual or psychological violence. We have laws that are perfectly formulated to prevent the number of violence but since laws are not properly imposed, the number of violence of women abused never ceases from rising.

Penalties are clearly stated, depending on the depths of the violence committed. Like sight for example the paying of certain amounts of money of the imprisonment. But since not all women and children are given the proper help they need and are not properly educated by are said laws most of the cases are left neglected. When money gets involved in the said situation, come women choose to stay in silence than spend large amounts of moneys and ending up with nothing. Some other cases fear the long judicial procedures.

I personally think that we have enough laws. And that our law I really nor our problem. Where we should be giving more of our attention is on the proper imposition of laws and the establishment of help systems. If more helps systems are built then it might be easier for all abused individuals to talk. And if laws are just properly imposed, the number of abused and perpetrator might decrease.
