

“HUMAN RIGHTS: CHILD LABOR: CHILD RIGHTS”

By: Sadjail, Shanilyn R.

College of Information Technology and Technical Education

Universidad de Zamboanga

Zamboanga City, Philippines

For child farm workers, life is of poverty and danger. Because of an exception in the federal child labor law, children can work for hire in agriculture at far younger ages, for far longer hours, and in far more hazardous conditions than other working children. In the last years, children work on farms in 14 states across the country. For too many, farm work means an early end to childhood.

Nowadays, children are suffering because of their parents, mostly taken for granted. Because of lack of guidance, children are in to labor or even slaves in rampant happenings such as robbery and some are invaded by drugs, providing them satisfaction in behalf of poverty.

These are caused of rights deprivation. Every child has the right to live life as every other real child lived.