“Youth is the hope of the nation”. If we dig the meaning deeper, one may realize that without young persons, our country’s future might be not a good life. But the question is? Are the young people of today were given the best opportunities for them to have a good future? Are they treated well? Are they all given the chance to go to school? We all know that our country Philippines is one of the countries with high-poverty rates. Because of this, many families were striving hard for money. They do everything to eat three meals a day. Parents are the one who look for livelihood of the family but today, children work too instead of reading and writing. And because of this, most of the children grew up learning nothing and didn’t succeed in their lives.

Each a child must be send to school. It is their right of education. The world of work is not a ready place for them. They must be in school so that they will learn how to read, write and count. Parents must not force their son or daughter to work for their living. There will be many opportunities for a child if he/she was send to school. For me, education is a big priority. Graduating with a college diploma is like a ripe fruit you harvest from a tree. It is the fruit of success. No one must hinder a person to go to school and learn. It is the right of every student to be in school. Of our government ill implement programs related to education so that the poor children will benefit, it will be a great opportunity for the children to learn. I hope that our government will open up chances for the poor children to go to school for free scholarships in which they are encouraged to study. If they do this, the next generation will be better if we start to change our education system. Without youth, our country will have an unpredictable future. No one will lead and bring glory to our country. No one will look after the resources that have been handed down from generation to generation. Therefore, the rights of a student to be in school must be look after and must be given prioritized.
