Human Rights in Peace and Order

Tacbobo, Sheva
School of Education Arts and Science
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City

Peace describes a society or a relationship that is operating harmoniously and without violent conflict. Peace is commonly understood as the absence of hostility or the existence of healthy or newly healed interpersonal or international relationships, safety in matters of social or economic welfare, the acknowledgment of equality and fairness in political relationships. In international relations, peacetime is the absence of any war or conflict.

Peace and order is the very most important in our community, by then we can protect the lives of the people by maintaining the security in our society, and also not only the assign personnel will take good care of our community also ourselves for protection on the criminal, it is the right of the people to assign personnel to take care our community, there's a lot of examples in terms of peace and order, like for example, the order must be implemented by anyone who is elected in a certain place, for the safety and security of the people.

In order to maintain public order and ensure peace, the Provincial Government is actively instituting major social order improvement measures to reinforce control and prosecution of eight types of businesses such as dance halls, etc. It is also cracking down on suggestive advertising posters, gambling, sexually explicit video games and excessive noise nuisances of all kinds.

The police have widely set up service centres and strengthened the "119 Emergency Service" and the Police Broadcasting Station to provide prompt and courteous service. It has also taken measures to ensure the safety of citizens and aliens alike, to organize volunteer police to further enhance community safety, and to expand the use of civilians in neighbourhood patrolling and strengthen cooperation between the police and citizens for crime prevention.