

Human Rights on Education

Mark Anthony Francisco
School of Education Arts and Science
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City

The right to education means that there should be rights in, to and through education. The last of these, through education, is largely a question of learning about your rights, about the links to other human rights, about citizenship, peace, reconciliation, and respect for others. This can only be fulfilled if all your other education rights are respected and protected, and may in short be called human rights education. As humans, our number one priority should be to try all the best that we can to live successfully on planet earth. We are expected to pursue that ability which is to survive more than mere animals. As intelligent creatures with copious amount of curiosity, our quest should be to conquer every part of our universe and explore its grandness so that we can experience nature in full and life in general. Instead of sticking to status quo and thereby living a life of routine just like most of our parents did, our bearing should be to visit those places our parent dreamt of, becoming those persons they wished to become and do those things they only hoped for.

Education need not to be expensive but facing the fact and reality now a days education is really expensive and it should be emphasize to every one. Education is not we inherent, but it is what we pass on to our children and to the next generation. And in order to escape from poverty education is the best solution, but on the other hand we can't also deny the fact that even though our government is giving a full force support by building some infrastructure building or public schools intended for those less fortunate so that they can acquire good quality education but still many of the youth has gone out of school. Education serves as the means to bring about the desired change in society, to develop a generation of virtuous individuals and thus contribute to the development of good human beings. The fundamental purpose of education is to gain knowledge, inculcate the forms of proper conduct and acquire technical competency. Education serves as the means to develop oneself physically, mentally and socially. The importance of education to youths manifests itself in terms of the need to cultivate the youths of society into mature individuals. Education is important for the youths, as youth is their growing stage. It is the time to develop the principles of life, make career decisions and begin the pursuit of one's goals.

Education to the youths should consist of the training that is an extension to their fields of interest. The education should help the youths define their career objectives, decide what they want from life and enable them to achieve success in their fields of interest. Education to youths must aim at helping an individual form a skill set and work upon it to develop expertise in the areas of his/her interest. The education for youths should consist of courses that can help the youths with their careers and aims of life.

And jumping to conclusions we can't also blame the government for that certain reasons. We have to be an eye session by looking forward to the fact that another primary reason education is important, is that it's become a basic requirement for so many employers.