

Human Rights and its Development

Rhaspi Mahamod
Certificate in Respiratory Therapy
School of Allied Medicine
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

Human rights are important to us people because this shows our attitude and it also describes us as a human being. Human traits need development because as we grow old we communicate more people and it also helps us to show how responsible we are in life.

As we develop our human rights we are able to gain more knowledge in human life and more people will respect us because we are educated and professionals.