Human right in the Philippines is not worse as the human rights in the other countries. Though there are some instances that this right is yet hard to find. One good example is the makati police scandal which was happened year ago. Till now the police who tortured the prisoners were not yet executed the governments are very weak interns of justice here in the Philippines.

But comparing to other countries. I can say that the Philippines is not yet worst. There is also instances that human rights were implemented and I can say that the new government can reverse or can implement the human rights fairly.
