

“Human Rights”

Nurullah, Shara A.
School of Allied Medicine
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City

Human rights are rights and freedom of everybody by the fact of being human and without distinction of any kind of race, sex, language, nationality, religion, political and other opinion. Because every person has its rights and freedom and it is covered and supported by the commission of human rights.

And as a person, you have the right to live, respect, education and enjoy your life being what you are and enjoy your life being what you are and has the right to treat respectfully. Because they are born free and equal in dignity and rights.

And in addition, although they have the human rights or the right being a human but it has a limitation regardless by not disobeying the laws.