

World Peace

Abdurakman K. Hadzra
Bachelor of Science in Nursing
School of Allied Medicine
Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

World Peace should start within us and within our home. If there is love because this is the greatest principle of all, as love is the greatest power. It is important that the value of love be fully understood and acted on as it is through love that our highest and most valued qualities are strengthened and expressed. There is no limit to its extent that the power of love can be developed. It is this principle above all others that is capable of creating peace between all people on earth. There should be forgiveness, letting go of hate and the desire for revenge for it is healthy not only to those forgiven. This is the healthy way to move forward and solve problems between gaps where revenge only perpetrates war and sufferings.

Some say that religion has been the cause of at least some of the war and suffering in the world. This is unfortunate because this is not the purpose of religion. The core values of most religions and spiritual paths are very similar and represent a common purpose that could be used to unite them to work together for worthy goals. There should be a free will- the right to decide for them which religion to follow or to follow none at all. To fully honor this principle is to honor other religion and spiritual paths and the choice of others have made to follow them.