

RIGHT TO EDUCATE

JULIE MARK B. GAMO

Universidad de Zamboanga
Zamboanga City, Philippines

Every woman, man, youth and child has the human right to education, training and information, and to other fundamental human rights dependent upon realization of the human right to education. The human right to education entitles every woman, man, youth and child to take their free and compulsory elementary education and to readily available forms of secondary and higher education. They should have freedom from discrimination in all areas and levels of education, and to equal access to continuing education and vocational training. The government should look on to this because many of the urban people wanted to go to school; some of private and public organizations are helping the urban people.
