Lightning is like the conflict or misunderstanding here on earth. A lightning that make you feel scared of what will come next. The loud thunder is like the war of different countries. Many innocent people are involved, even if they don't want to be involved. Wars between bigger countries cause great damage to the social and economical relationship between countries. Worst of all smaller countries gets involve and suffer. How can we attain world peace if the terrorist keeps on putting the lives of innocent people in danger? I am really afraid of the thunder. Just like other people. We really are afraid of what the conflict may lead into.

I asked myself, is world peace really attainable? Last year a nearby place near our community was really the talk of the town because almost every day there's a person killed. Everyone is afraid of that place. That's why I wonder if you want to attain world peace it should start within yourself. But how will you tell these people about this certain concern if world peace is attained by mankind. Every day is a gift. Everyone is happy. Our lives are easy, no conflicts. No misunderstandings, no war and especially no innocent people will get harmed by anyone because if only all the people will imagine what why was the result between the wars between two countries. Many innocent lives were taken. If only they could stop all that. Our lives would be lighter and if only they could reflect and realize what will be the result of their actions. We the people of this world will have peace.
