Have you ever think of comparing the past and the present time? Are we lucky enough in a world that is full of “instant”?

It was the primitive men who learned and explore their own distinct surrounding on their environment. They are the first to discover how things, “practical things” in life works like the use of fire, cooking, cultivating and taking good care of their environment. The environment for them was like the source of their almost everything they needed. The environment brought satisfaction, sources of raw materials, home and a place where healthy and peaceful living reside. The environment becomes a source of work for them to grow and nourish. They work hand and hand. The people work just by using their hand and strength without the use of technology of course because it was not yet discovered. Due to the curiosity of man and because of the “want” to make things easier. Man started to search experiment and excavate solution to their wants and needs in life. The modern and the contemporary era was the emergence of technology that makes life easier. The people from this era or period of time were eager to search and search for what they call “their life satisfaction”. Indeed this period of time that we are living was almost amazing because all our wants and needs can be found and present in this time but this is also the period in which the environment is in a malady condition now a days we are experiencing calamities, chaos and war. The “earth” is in bad condition people are indeed people who doesn’t stop to search for their wants in life without knowing that what they are making and searching can destroy the environment that can cause problem from a single city to the entire world.

If I were to choose from the two period of time, I’d rather had no electricity at home, no cell phones, laptop or any gadget than to stay in a world that is full of disorder. I rather have to choose the past, to stay healthy and free from huge environmental dilemma.
