When we say human rights the first word come in to my mind is freedom. Every human has their freedom or freewill even you are rich or poor.

In my research about human rights it is the rights and freedom to which all human are entitled. From the definition itself it is all applicable to all people no matter what their background, race or origin to have their freedom and rights.

Human rights are very important. One of the importances of human rights is to prevent racial or background discrimination, especially indigenous people they need to be respected so they will respect us in return.

Not all are rights are correct so we had ethics and law to guide us with our freedom or freewill.
